Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15th, 1876.

PRESIDENTIAL FIGURING.

For several months previous to a presidential election, the leading dailies generally indulge in casting the horoscope as to how the various States will throw their votes in the electoral college. The calculations of the New York World have been, in the past, singularly accurate; and its predictions as to the next race strike one as particularly so. It says that, of the Southern States, the Democracy will carry without doubt, 127 votes. Its candidate will also get the 12 electoral votes of the Pacific States, and those of Connecticut and New Jersey. It will, therefore, only be necessary to carry New York in order to elect a Democratic President, with several votes to spare; as the three States just named carry 50 votes, which, added to the others, will give 189, something over the necessary number. The lesson in this estimate, which appeals to every man's common sense as founded upon experience and knowledge of facts, is that New York must be carried, at every hazard, and that upon its 35 electoral votes hangs the success of the Democracy next Fall. That State has, in the mutations of parties and politics, become the key without which no presidential candidate can enter the electoral college with any assurance of being its choice. Blaine evidently feels the importance of this fact, and his anxiety to ingratiate himself with the leading Republicans of that State explains the haste with which he left the House lately, and journeyed toward the political Mecca. Conkling had been endorsed, a few days previous, by the Republican Convention which met at Albany, and Mr. Blaine found it necessary to stop, for a time, his scheming to hamper the Democrats in the House, and to go to New York, in order that he might unite all disaffected elements on himself. New York, then, must be carried; and the ability of a candidate to perform this should be, in conjunction with other qualities which fit him for the position, a prerequisite to his nomination by the St. Louis Convention. Such a man, with the South and Pacific States shoulder to shoulder for him, which they certainly will be, will be perfectly invincible, and his election a foregone conclusion.

HOW MUCH WOULD HE HAVE STOLEN?

Just before Belknap's downfall, he submitted, in reply to a resolution of the House, his budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877. It amounted to some $26,000,000, or about $1,000,000 for each regiment in the service. The House now calls for a new estimate from his successor, and little interest is felt in his reply; as it will exhibit, among other things, exactly how much Belknap calculated to steal during the year.

A RADICAL GOVERNOR IN THE BALANCE.

The late developments before the House Committee on Expenditures in the Post Office Department have brought to Washington Governor John L. Routt, of Colorado, formerly Cresswell's Second Assistant-Postmaster General. The Governor is charged with having received $20,000 from one F. P. Sawyer, an extensive mail contractor, in consideration of his good office in securing certain profitable contracts for said Sawyer. Routt, as Second Assistant-Postmaster General, had the letting of all mail contracts, and it was during his incumbency that the corruption subsequently unearthed took deep root; extending to every contract of importance in this country. On his retirement, this state of affairs was made manifest by a slight investigation; but nothing was ever made public implicating Routt until the other day, when a witness before the Congressional Committee testified that Sawyer told him that he had paid Routt $20,000. As a matter of course, Routt denies this most strenuously; and, as Sawyer is dead, the charge cannot be directly substantiated. The "Governor" will consequently go back to his territory duly "vindicated."

GRANT "SICK"—WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH HIM?

General Grant was "seriously indisposed," the local papers reported, for several days last week. I would not consider the fact worthy of mention, were it not of some significance just at this juncture. It has been rumored that the President has become seriously disturbed in mind, since the result of some of the recent investigations, and is now subject to frequent fits of "indisposition." Many persons, who profess to know Grant's habits, attribute these attacks to the effect of undue alcoholic stimulation; but it is difficult, in such cases, to determine definitely which is cause, and which effect. Yet the President certainly has reason now, if ever man had, for mental perturbation and distress. He sees the great body of the people who once honored him as a successful soldier ready to despise him as the companion and defender of thieves. He beholds the members of his cabinet falling, one by one, beneath the axe of investigation; and an administration begun in honour and glory, amid the plaudits of the multitude going down, in its eighth year, ignored and disgraced, followed by the execrations of a country whose confidence he has so long abused. Is it any wonder that he should now and then feel "indisposed?"

COMING TO THEIR SENSES.

Not the least of the good signs in the political sky, may be mentioned the position of neutrality and independence of thousands of the negroes of the South as expressed in their recent Convention at Nashville, Tenn. Such a position is just what their true friends at the South have always advised them to take; and inasmuch as they expressed their determination to support that party which "kept its promises," it needs not the gift of prophecy to foresee that a large proportion, if not a majority, of the race, will eventually drift into the Democratic ranks. It is the first time they have asserted the highest privilege of freedom, since their emancipation, and gives promise of a brighter future for their race.

A GALA DAY IN WASHINGTON.

While I am writing this letter, procession after procession, and thousands of sight seers, are wending their way from all quarters of the city and the adjoining country, to Lincoln Park, to witness the ceremonies attendant upon the unveiling of Lincoln's Statue. The departments are all closed, and it is a general holiday. Pennsylvania Avenue is thronged with pedestrians and vehicles of every description, and presents a lively appearance.

"NONE OF OUR FUNERAL."

The Democratic minority in the Senate is being roundly abused by the Republican papers for the failure to confirm Dana as Minister to England. They say, "You could have done it, and you didn't;" though just why the Democrats should be abused for the failure of his nomination is not particularly clear, seeing that it was "none of their funeral."

WASHINGTONIAN.

The Chinese Question.

In the House of Representatives, March 22, 1876, Mr. Luttrell by unanimous vote introduced the following bill, which was read twice, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed:

A BILL TO PROHIBIT CONTRACTS FOR SERVILE LABOR.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled: That every contract for labor or service which, or any part of which, is or shall be the consideration for or in respect to the passage or transportation of or for any subject of China, Japan, or other oriental country, to the United States, is hereby declared to be void, and any person who shall, contrary to this act, contract with any subject of China, Japan, or other oriental country, to supply to another the labor of any Chinese, or enforce such contract, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, upon conviction thereof, by indictment in the district court of the United States, shall be punished by imprisonment of not less than one nor more than three years, and a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, together with the costs of prosecution, one-half of which shall be paid to the informer, and the other half to the Chinese, Japanese, or Mongolian with whom such contract shall have been made, upon condition that he or she immediately return to his or her native country, under such regulations for the enforcement of this condition as the Court may prescribe.

SEC. 2. That every contract for compulsory or involuntary labor service, which, or any part of which, is or shall be the consideration for or in respect to the passage or transportation of or for any subject of China, Japan, or other oriental country to the United States, and every contract for what is known as coolie labor, or for any labor of the like description made in the United States, or which is to be performed in the United States, though made elsewhere; or for the immigration, transportation, or importation into the United States of persons known as coolies, or of the same or the like description, is hereby declared to be illegal, null and void; and every case in which the price or hire of the said passage or transportation, or any part thereof, shall be paid or advanced by any person or persons other than the passenger or person to be transported, shall be deemed prima facie to be a case within this section and in violation thereof.

SEC. 3. That any attempt to enforce in the United States, except according to the laws of the land, any labor or contracts for labor of the class described in section 1 of this act, or of any other class, or to control or dispose of the labor of the persons of the class in said section described, or of any other class, except in the same manner, shall be deemed to be a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, by indictment in the District or Circuit Court of the United States, the persons found guilty thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years, or by a fine of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, together with the costs of prosecution, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 4. That any rule, regulation, custom, practice, proceedings, or understanding contrary to the provisions of this act is hereby declared null and void; and any attempt to enforce the same is hereby declared to be a felony, punishable in the courts and in the manners provided in the third section.

SEC. 5. That the permit of certificate of the voluntary emigration of any Chinese, Japanese, or oriental subject required by section four of the act to prohibit the coolie trade by American vessels, passed February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and six-two, shall be furnished by the consul to the master of the vessel in duplicate, and upon the arrival in any port of the United States of any vessel with Chinese, Japanese, or subjects of other oriental countries as passengers from any port of place in China, Japan, or other oriental country, one certificate or permit shall be filed by the master with the collector or chief officer of the custom at such port or place, and the other shall be filed by him with the clerk of the district where such port or place is situated. The fees of the consul for giving or refusing such certificate or permit shall be fifty dollars for each vessel. Any master who shall omit for five days after the arrival of his vessel, as aforesaid, to file such duplicates as herein provided, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, by indictment in the district or circuit courts of the United States, shall be punished as provided in section one of this act. Any vessel which shall carry passengers in violation of said section four of said act of February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be liable to the penalties provided by section one of said act; and one-third of the net cash proceeds of any forfeiture made in such case, after payment of all costs and charges of court, shall belong in equal moieties to the United States marshal and district attorney of the court decreeing such forfeiture. Any foreign vessel which, being engaged in the carrying of passengers of the class of persons and between the places described in said act of February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be liable to the provisions of that act, and also of this section; any person, though not a citizen of the United States, who shall violate the provisions of section three of said act of February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be liable as therein provided, if he shall be within the United States. No emigration of Chinese, Japanese, or subject of other oriental country shall be deemed voluntary within the meaning of the said act of February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, which is in violation of any of the provisions of this act.

SEC. 6. That any contract or agreement to procure, aid, or encourage the importation or immigration of Chinese, Japanese, or subjects of other oriental countries, into the United States, shall be null and void; and any person entering into any such contract or agreement shall be deemed guilty of a felony, punishable in the manner and in the courts provided in the third section of this act.

SEC. 7. That any contract or agreement to employ or to furnish employment to any subject of China, Japan, or other oriental country, or as to the nature or term of his or her service, or as to the amount or use of his or her wages prior or subsequent to his or her immigration into the United States, shall be null and void; and any person entering into such contract or agreement shall be subject to conviction and punishment, as provided in section three of this act.

SEC. 8. That any contract or agreement on behalf of any vessel or ship to transport any subject of China, Japan, or other oriental country into the United States, made with any other than the person so to be transported, shall be null and void; and any person entering into such contract or agreement shall be subject to conviction, fine, and imprisonment, as provided in the foregoing sections.

SEC. 9. That any person recognizing, executing, or enforcing, or aiding to recognize, execute, or enforce any of said contracts or agreements, wherever made, shall be subject to conviction and punishment as provided in this act.

SEC. 10. That it shall not be lawful for any vessel to transport into the United States any Chinese or Japanese woman not accompanied by her husband or father, and such relationship of the woman to the man accompanying her shall be evidenced by a certificate or permit in all respect provided by section five of this act; before the departure of the woman from the said vessel, in any port in the United States, the said certificate or permit shall be delivered to the collector of the proper district, whose duty it shall be to inquire into the facts; and the violation of any of the provisions of this section by the owner, agent, or officer of any vessel or ship will subject the offender to conviction and punishment, as provided in the said fifth section

THE FIRST PUBLIC READING OF THE DECLARATION.—The Declaration was written by Jefferson, as he himself stated in a letter to Dr. Mease, in his lodging-house at the south-west corner of Market and Seventh streets. The house is still standing, and is occupied by a tailor, who shows his patriotism by calling his shop the "Temple of Liberty Clothing Store." The instrument was signed, as our readers know, in the east room of the Statehouse, on the lower floor. It appeared in the next day's paper (side by side with an advertisement of a negro child for sale who had had measles and small-pox), but was not officially given to the people until noonday on the 8th of July, when it was read to a large concourse of people in the Statehouse yard by John Nixon, deputed to the task by the Sheriff of Philadelphia, who had received it from the committee. The stage on which the reader stood was a rough wooden platform on the line of the eastern walk, about half-way between Fifth and Sixth streets. Deborah Logan, who lived in the neighborhood, states that she heard from the garden every word of the instrument read, and thought the voice was Chas. Thompson's. In spite of all evidence in favor of Nixon, we choose to believe her. The Man of Truth should have first made known those words to humanity. Cheers rent the welkin, a feu-de-joie was fired, the chimes of Christ Church rang through all the bright summer day, and the old bell gave at last to the world the message it had received a quarter of a century before, and proclaimed liberty to all the world.

The daily papers—little thin sheets a few inches square—give us for weeks afterward accounts of the rejoicing and wild enthusiasm of the other Provinces as the Declaration reached them. In New York one singular effect produced was that "a general jail delivery of all prisoners took place, in pursuance of the Declaration of Independence by the Hon. Congress."—REBECCA HARDING DAVIS, in Harper's Magazine for May.

THE NICARAGUA INTER-OCEANIC CANAL.—The Inter-Oceanic Canal Commission presented their report to President Grant early in February, recommending the selection of the Nicaragua route for the construction of the ship canal from the Pacific to the Atlantic; but it is only within the last three days that the President took action thereon, so far as to approve the report. A Washington dispatch of the 19th instant says the President favors the formation of an international stock company to construct it, and that an effort to form such will shortly be made. Both Nicaragua and Costa Rica are anxious to have this canal begun, and will favor the project in every possible manner. The latter has withdrawn its army from the Nicaraguan frontier and disbanded it. Judge O'Sullivan, a promoter of this canal, has just arrived in New York from Costa Rica, to work in the interests of the project.—S. F. Call.

A FAVORED COMMONWEALTH.—Kentucky is a highly favored commonwealth. She has 40,000 square miles of fertile soil, and does not owe a dollar of State debt. Her tobacco crop is now more than double that of Virginia, and nearly half the crop of the entire country. She raises nearly half the hemp the whole country produces. She has nine millions of acres of virgin forest, and more iron ore than there is in Pennsylvania, with 12,874 square miles of coal lands. She produces the finest blooded cattle and horses, and mules seem to grow in Kentucky spontaneously. She also rejoices in being the place of nativity of the prettiest women in the world.—Examiner.

THE suit of C. E. Pickett against the Judges of the Supreme Court of California for false imprisonment, which was recently withdrawn from the Twelfth District Court, has been recommenced in the Third District Court.

Ordered to be published in the Examiner, and a copy sent to the Chairman of the several County Committees.

PETER DONAHUE, Chairman.
J. C. MAYNARD, Secretary.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR. — Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, arrived in San Francisco on Tuesday last, overland.

SWEET MUSIC.—Gilmore's Band is delighting immense audiences at the Pavilion in San Francisco with its enrapturing music.

LEGAL TENDER.—The silver currency act having passed both houses of Congress and been signed by the President, silver is now a legal tender to the amount of $20.

RAINFALL.—The total amount of rain last published for the season was 20.29 inches. On the 7th of April there was a fall of 1.01, and on the 22d .39, making a total of 21.69 inches to date.

NEW VOLUME.—The Kern County Gazette, published by J. F. Lintbleum, has commenced its second volume, and said to be already on a paying basis. It is a paper well deserving Democratic support.

SAN FRANCISCO TO VIRGINIA.—On and after May 1st the Vallejo train will be continued to Virginia City, stopping twenty minutes in Sacramento, the whole trip consuming less than seventeen hours. It will leave Sacramento, Davisville and Vallejo same time as heretofore.

CANDIDATES TO THE FRONT.—According to the New York World, that State will be unanimously for Tilden for President in the National Convention. Indiana of course goes for her favorite son, Hendricks. Either of them are good enough and would be sure of an election if nominated.

NEW PATENTS.—Through Dewey & Co., Patent Agents, San Francisco, we receive the following advance list of U. S. Patents, granted to Pacific Coast inventors, viz: Henry H. Morgan and Albert Gerry, Oakland, Cal., car couplings; Marshall M. Smith and Fletcher W. Potts, Verdi, Nev., adding pencils; Jacob Zech, S. F., wrest plank bridge plate for piano fortes. Design—Nathaniel Weston, S. F., cameo card mount.

WARNING WORDS.—The San Francisco Commercial Herald says, "it is undeniable that the nucleus of an organization has been formed in this State for the forcible expulsion of the Chinese, and it is as true that it is composed of material which will be wholly unscrupulous in the method of its accomplishment." There is no doubt that the feeling is strong against the Chinese throughout the State, but violence should be avoided.

Amended School Law.

WOODLAND, April 24th, 1875.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT:—Will you please insert in your next issue the following section of a bill which became a law during the last session of the Legislature:

Section 1775 of the Political Code, relating to the renewal of teachers' certificates, is amended so as to read as follows: Section 1775. The Board may, without examination, renew certificates, provided that upon the application of the person who has held a second grade certificate six years, and who has passed a satisfactory examination three times, and the person who has held a third grade certificate three years, and who has passed a satisfactory examination three times, the Board shall grant such persons a corresponding certificate without examination, to remain in full force and effect for a period of five years for a second grade certificate, and three years for a third grade certificate.

Teachers who hold second and third grade certificates that expire during the present year will please take notice that they can be renewed only under the provisions of this Bill.

H. B. PENDEGAST,
Superintendent of Schools.

MUNICIPAL TICKET.—At the head of our columns appears the ticket nominated by the Democracy on Tuesday evening for Town officers for the ensuing two years. The names composing it are those of gentlemen possessed of sound judgment, in whom we are perfectly satisfied the people have the utmost confidence, both as to capability and honesty, the two great requisites in a public officer. In the selection of Trustees—as shown in the proceedings of the Convention—four of them were chosen so as to represent the four quarters of the town, Main and First streets being the dividing lines, and the fifth, Mr. Krellenberg, for the town at large. Mr. Thomas, the candidate for Marshal, is an unusually good business man, possessing the energy and activity which peculiarly fit him for the position. As a whole, we do not see that any fault can be found with the ticket. It now remains for the Democracy to see that it is elected entire. One thing is certain, our opponents cannot put up a set of stronger or better men, as they are not to be found in Woodland. We expect that every Democrat and many Independents and Republicans will vote this ticket on Monday next.

TWO DEAD COCKS IN THE PIT.—A good deal has been said in regard to a fee paid to Mr. Pendleton, Democrat, as an attorney in private life by a railroad company. It now transpires that Mr. Blaine, Republican and a Member of Congress, received from the U. P. R. R. Co., in 1871, $64,000. Whether the merits of these cases warrant it or not, it is quite probable that these disclosures will have the effect to kill both of those gentleman so far as any Presidential aspirations are concerned. The country demands a man above the taint of suspicion. There is a radical difference however between receiving money as a fee by a private attorney and a public official receiving it without having rendered any apparent services therefor, as Mr. Blaine appears to have done. He denies the charge.

WOODLAND REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.—The Republican County Convention met at the Court House at 2 o'clock P.M. on Monday and was called to order by Judge J. A. Hutton, Chairman of the Central Committee. Judge Hutton was, on motion, made Chairman of the Convention, and D. M. Burns, Secretary. The following persons were elected as Delegates to the State Convention: C. F. Reed, J. A. Hutton, I. N. Hoag, T. C. Pockman, J. C. Campbell, H. W. Atwell and F. S. Freeman. A County Central Committee was selected as follows: I. N. Hoag, W. S. Williams, J. A. Hutton, C. F. Reed, F. S. Freeman, T. C. Pockman and S. N. Mering. The Convention then adjourned.

A NEW FEATURE.—The White House has adopted the city style of having a dress making department in connection with the store. Mrs. Webber, our most fashionable and stylish dressmaker, superintends, which is of itself a sufficient guarantee that it will be managed satisfactorily. This speaks well for the enterprise of the White House, which has also just been replenished with new spring goods.

ARRIVAL.—Dr. Holmes, D. D. S., mentioned last week as "to arrive," has purchased the interest of Dr. J. N. Prather in the dental business of Prather & Brother, and will hereafter be one of our citizens. The Dr. is a graduate of Philadelphia Dental College, has had many years of successful practice, and comes here very highly recommended. We welcome him to his new field of labor.

BASE BALL.—The Silver Star Base Ball Club of this place wish to make known that they will play any Club in the County a friendly game of base ball for a ball and bat, at the picnic on the 6th of May at Knights Landing; game to commence at 1 o'clock.

SPIRITUALISM.—Mrs. Dr. French is announced to give two of her interesting "seances" at Central Hall this (Thursday) and to-morrow (Friday) evenings. Miss Mamie French will assist with her inimitable readings, etc. Admission, only 25 cents.

ANOTHER TRIAL.—The steam fire engine was tried again on Tuesday last and seemed to give good satisfaction. The Trustees have not yet decided whether they will accept it.

NEW FIRM.—The mercantile business conducted the last few months by B. Joseph, has been sold and will hereafter be managed by Messrs Levy & Oser.

Our Dixon Letter.

DIXON, April 24th, 1876.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT:—The weather being so very pleasant, the crops growing nicely, everybody in good humor, and your correspondent enjoying the best of health, I will now try to give you a few items.

EXCITEMENT.

On Saturday night last a file of about twenty men under the command of Mr. Peter Timm, formerly Tax Collector of Solano County, proceeded punctually at 12 o'clock midnight to a warehouse on the west side of the railroad and began in good earnest to tear down the structure. It being a very calm night, the breaking up of the lumber created a good deal of noise, so that folks living in the neighborhood not knowing the cause of the tumult jumped out of their beds in a hurry. One man started out on the street dressed similar to a Fiji Islander, thinking that an earthquake was shaking the western part of the town, and after everything was explained to him it caused a great deal of merriment. In just nineteen hours the whole building was removed. The trouble seems to have arisen in this way: In 1869 the warehouse was built by Messrs. Bohever and Harry Peterson on ground of which they obtained a lease from a certain Mr. Haskins, owner of the land on which the house was built. About three weeks ago a gentleman of this place who testified before the Legislative Committee on Corporations to the effect that the people of this section of the country did not want freights and fares reduced, bought the land from Mr. Haskins. When this became known, the above gentlemen went to the purchaser and offered to buy the land from him, but he astonished them by saying that he was willing to sell them the land and the warehouse also. Of course they were not willing to buy their own house, so they employed the men to move it, and as the result has shown, have been successful. The affair has caused a great deal of excitement in the town, and all day yesterday people were swarming around the place where the men were working.

BANQUET.

Silveyville Lodge No. 201, F. & A. M., gave a banquet in Public Hall last Saturday night in honor of the visit of the Most Worshipful Grand Master of the State, Dr. J. M. Browne. About one hundred were present, among them some from Davisville, Vacaville, Winters, Vallejo and Suisun. The supper was excellent. The Frahm Brothers were the caterers on this occasion.

MAY DAY.

The Committee of Arrangements of the K. of P. have almost everything ready for their picnic on the 1st of May. The firemen of this place will participate in the grand parade in the morning in their new uniform. A splendid dancing hall has been erected on the grounds.

THE LATE J. A. ELLIS.

The funeral of our deceased friend, J. A. Ellis, was very largely attended. He was buried by the Masons and Odd Fellows of this place. About six hundred persons took part in the sad ceremonies.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. K. E. Kelley, of this place was admitted to practice in the County Court, last week.

At the Republican Primary Election the following gentlemen were elected delegates to the County Convention: A. Kirby, Hans Bohever, J. M. Dudley, J. C. Merryfield and George McKinley.

Our public schools will close in about two weeks. We understand that some of the teachers intend to open a private school during vacation.

All the hotels in town are crowded, and business in general is very good.

The Fire Company will turn out on the 1st of May in their new uniforms. They will make a very fine appearance.

The people in this neighborhood have been affected lately by the "epizootic," but this warm weather will have a good effect upon the afflicted.

We will now conclude hoping to see some of your townfolks here on the 1st of May to take part in our festivities. Respectfully, ROMAN.

WE BEG leave to inform the residents of Woodland and Yolo county that we have bought the entire business belonging to B. Joseph. We have determined to bring this house up to its former standard, i e, make it again the store for the people, which reputation it has earned by its fair and honest dealings. Thanking our patrons and friends for the liberal patronage they have bestowed on this house in the past, we solicit a continuance of the same and remain your humble servants, LEVY & OSER.*

LAND AGENCY.—J. D. Lawson has accepted the Yolo County agency of the General Land Agency of California, and will attend to any business entrusted to him with care and promptitude. Having been but recently County Register, and being one of its oldest residents, Mr. Lawson is well qualified for the position. The Principal office is in San Francisco.

MARIPOSA GAZETTE.—This uniformly nice looking and ably conducted Democratic weekly paper is out in a new dress from Painter & Co's foundry, and looks handsomer than ever.

A HOME-MADE CARPET.—An Eastern lady says: Have any of you a spare bed-chamber, seldom used, which you would like to carpet at little expense? Go to the paper-hanger's store and select a paper looking as much like a carpet as you can find. Having taken it home, first paper the floor of your bedroom with brown paper, or newspapers. Then over this or these put down your wall paper. A good way to do this will be to put a coat of paste on the floor the width of the roll of paper and the length of the room and then lay down, unrolling and and smoothing at the same time. When the floor is all covered, then size and varnish. Only dark glue and common furniture varnish may be used, and the floor will look all the better for the darkening these will give it. When it is dry, put down a few rugs by the bedside and before the toilet table, and you have as pretty a carpet as you could wish. A carpet, too, that will last for years, if not subject to constant wear, and at a trifling expense. I myself used a room one entire Summer prepared in this way—used it constantly; and when the house was sold in the Fall, the purchaser asked me to take up the oil-cloth, as he wished to make some improvements which would be sure to injure it.

CAPTURED.—In the mongrel Republican and Independent State Convention at Sacramento yesterday, the Radicals were captured by the Independents securing the organization. Verily, this is confusion worse confounded.

To the Centennial Exposition.

The Chicago and North-Western Railway will, on and after May 1st, 1876, and until October 31st, 1876, have on sale in all of its coupon ticket offices, (including its two ticket offices at Omaha) round trip excursion tickets to Philadelphia and New York and return for Centennial Visitors. These tickets, for the round trip, will be sold at one and one-half of the usual rate for a trip one way. They will be of two classes, but will be sold at the same rates. One class of tickets will be good, East of Chicago, going and returning by the same route, and the other class will be good, East of Chicago, going by one route and returning by another, thus offering to the purchasers a choice of routes and chances to see various parts of the country.

Neither cars nor trains will be chartered for excursion parties going to the Centennial by this or any other road, nor will rates be less per person for parties large or small. Every person going will have to pay the same rate as is paid by his neighbor. No other road will be permitted to sell round trip tickets for the Centennial at any less rate than is quoted above. Reduced rate tickets reading only to the Exposition will not be sold, and the rates made are all for the full round trip. All Agents of the Chicago and North-Western Railway will, in due time, be fully advised as to rates from their stations for these Centennial Tickets, and will, after April 1st, 1876, be glad to answer all enquiries in regard to them.

Seeking health and a mild climate on the Pacific Coast during last Summer, my attention was called (while suffering with a severe headache) to Dr. Warren's YERBA BUENA BITTERS, and I was persuaded to take some of the Bitters, which cured me so perfectly that I went to the druggists and bought a bottle next morning, and have not taken any other medicine since. It is a perfect cure for sick headache, for any derangement of the stomach, or constipation, and I do recommend it cheerfully to every one, before any other medicine, as it leaves the system in a real healthy state, and no change of diet is necessary.

Town and County Matters

Proceedings of the Woodland Democratic Mass Nominating Convention.

The adjourned Democratic Convention for the nomination of officers for the Corporation of Woodland was held at the Court House on Tuesday evening, April 25th.

The Convention was called to order by the Chairman, Castillo Ball. By a vote of the Convention C. W. Bush was elected Secretary.

On motion of J. C. Ball, a committee of three was appointed on Order of Business, and the Chair appointed J. C. Ball, Geo. H. Jackson and J. Holland, and by a vote of the Convention W. M. Dewit and Alex. Montgomery were added to the Committee. The Committee reported that the first business in order should be the nomination of five Trustees, and the next the nomination of a candidate for Town Marshal. The report was accepted and the Committee discharged.

J. C. Ball moved that in selecting names for Trustees one should be chosen from each quarter of the Town and one from the town at large. The motion was carried. James Viers was nominated from the north-east quarter, unanimously, James Edmonds was unanimously nominated from the north-west quarter, and Geo. W. Hiatt unanimously nominated from the south-west quarter. For the south-east quarter P. Krellenberg and Geo. H. Jackson were placed in nomination. John Lambert and A. G. Read were appointed Tellers by the Chair. The ballot resulted in the nomination of Geo. H. Jackson. P. Krellenberg was then nominated to represent the Town at large.

The next in order was the nomination for Marshal. The names of Martin Steinmitz, J. W. Tilley and M. W. Thomas were submitted. After the second ballot Mr. Steinmitz withdrew his name, and on the fourth ballot M. W. Thomas was declared the nominee, Tilley having received 27 and Thomas 28 votes—a majority of all the votes cast.

On motion of J. C. Ball the nomination of Mr. Thomas was made unanimous. The Convention then adjourned. C. W. BUSH, Secretary.

NOTICE.—We take this method of saying to our friends through THE YOLO DEMOCRAT that we feel grateful to them for the interest manifested, and the large attendance we had to hear the lecture of Rev. C. C. Stratton, of San José—"Three Years Among the Saints," and hope to see them out yet in greater numbers on Friday night next, the 28th, to hear the Rev. M. C. Briggs, D.D., deliver his lecture "How to Fail." His popularity as a speaker of twenty-five years in California will surely give him a full house. W. C. C.

COUNTY COURT—E. R. BUSH, J.—The case of Brogan vs. Webber was continued for the term.

Barney vs. Town of Woodland: Demurrer overruled. Judgment of Court below modified by deducting $1.20.

People vs. Ridgeway: Defaulting witness in Brown case. Fined $15.

Adjourned to April 29th.

CLERK'S OFFICE.—The work of taking out the vault and partitions between the County Clerk's office and that heretofore used by the Auditor, is progressing and will be completed in a few days. This change became necessary on account of the two offices being combined in one, and the great inconvenience of the old arrangement.

FOR JEWELRY REPAIRS, done promptly and skilfully, go to L. Machefert's. *25

COMBINATION.—Wm. Williams, fashionable boot and shoemaker, has taken charge of the manufacturing department in the establishment of H. B. Pendegast & Co., as will be seen by their new card. Mr. Williams is A No. 1 in his profession. The store is also well stocked with ready-made work.

COUNTY COMMITTEE.—A meeting of the Democratic County Committee is called, to be held in Woodland on Saturday next, for the appointment of Primaries, County Convention, etc., preparatory to election of Delegates to the State Convention.

TO MUSIC PUPILS.—Mrs. Edwards desires to make it known through the DEMOCRAT that she will give lessons on the piano and guitar and in vocal music, during college vacation, at her rooms on Main street.

REMOVAL.—Mr. Schneider, music teacher and dealer, has removed to Mrs. Graham's residence, on Sixth near Main street.

Johnson's Universal Cyclopædia.

Says the Alta California: There is no man of business and no man of leisure, whether he be a graduate of a university, a counting-room, or a mechanic's workshop, or if he be a man remote from the centres of trade, a cultivator of the soil, that most invaluable "mudsill of society," the very base on which the grand superstructure of society rests, who does not often need a compact, available library to which he may refer at short notice for information upon any subject under consideration. No man can carry all information, facts, and dates, in his memory, available at all times. The most learned, the most ready memory is incapable of containing accurately all information, even if it were possible to acquire it. The great majority of men have not had the opportunity to fully acquire the knowledge necessary to their intelligent pursuit of life's business. Labor has been a necessity, somewhat limited education the result, and some ready, available substitute for a thorough course of reading, a requisite. Whether the inquirer be a merchant, farmer, mechanic, professional man, scholar, writer, poet or politician, a condensed library, information in a concentrated form, available at little cost or time, is what is needed. And this is what the properly compiled cyclopædia furnishes.

Such thoughts naturally arise while one examines "Johnson's New Universal Cyclopædia," the first two vols. of which are published, and a copy lying before us. This volume of some seventeen hundred pages, is one-fourth of the proposed work. That it deserves the term "Universal" will be conceded by all unprejudiced persons who carefully examine its contents. We have searched it to find some omissions of fact, of biography, history, geography, science, or other line of information, properly a subject for such a work, but have not yet found it. All the information is so condensed in style that the vast amount, although embracing so many more subjects, occupies much less space than other works of the kind. Johnson's Cyclopædia is a whole library condensed into four volumes, we might say, the world's history, science, biography, every subject simplified into proportions available for all occasions, all demands, and all persons. It has been prepared at great cost in money, in labor, in research, the ransacking of libraries, the drawing upon memory, the search through contemporary events, the investigations in science, literature, politics, biography. Evidently, no branch has been neglected, none forgotten. What no one mind could conceive, no one pair of eyes and hands accomplish, has been perfected by a union and harmonious working of a host of the ablest and most reliable men of the country and the world.

The names of the editors, from the chief, President A. P. Barnard of Columbia College, with his more than a score of assistant and associate editors, each distinguished in letters, arts, science or other branch of advanced knowledge, constitute an authority upon which the reader and the public may rely with the utmost confidence.

Then the work is available as to size and compactness, enabling the merchant to have it always upon his desk, ready for consultation; the scholar or professional man to keep it on his table convenient for immediate use; the man of any calling to have at his elbow, a companion whom he may trust, capable of instructing him on any subject at a moment's notice. No library can be complete without it; with it in possession and at hand, few persons will need any other, for it will be found a complete condensation of almost every branch of the world's information.

Mr. Loomis, the agent for Yolo, will visit all parts of the county as rapidly as a thorough canvass can be made, so that all will have an opportunity of procuring this great standard work, and which can only be procured by subscription.

NEW BUSINESS HOUSE.—The brick store next west of the Express Office is being fitted up by Messrs. C. S. Thomas and Thos. Porter, and will be filled in a few days with a complete stock of groceries and provisions. The extraordinary crops now promised will be sure to make business good this season. Success to the new business house.

BASKET PICNIC.—There will be a picnic in Dr. Pond's grove, one mile north-east of Woodland, on Monday next, May 1st, under the auspices of Yolo Grange. The public are respectfully invited to unite with the Grangers.

AT L. MACHEFERT'S, a fine assortment of jewelry. *25

PURCHASE.—M. F. Jones has purchased the brick store one door west of the Postoffice, and will use it as an organ and piano wareroom and music store. Glad to hear it. Mr. Jones is a live business man.

TURN VEREIN PICNIC.—Great preparations are making for the May Day picnic by the Turners and others who will join them. The location selected is a very pleasant one, on the banks of Cache Creek near Washington Gardens. The late rain has laid the dust nicely and freshened vegetation, so that with sunshine overhead and plenty of shade if required, it will be delightful to spend a day in the woods and mingle with friends from all parts of the county.

DONT FAIL to call at READ & FORRESTER'S and examine their stock of clothing and furnishing goods, boots, shoes, etc. *24

Impure Breath.

Among all the disagreeable consequences that follow the decay of the teeth, an impure breath must be the most mortifying and unpleasant to its possessor, and it is the most inexcusable and offensive in society; and yet the cause of it may easily be removed by cleansing your teeth daily with that justly popular dentifrice, Fragrant SOZODONT. It purifies and sweetens the breath, cools and refreshes the mouth, and gives a pearl-like appearance to the teeth. Gentlemen who indulge in smoking should cleanse their teeth with SOZODONT, as it removes all unpleasant odors of the weed. Ask your druggist for it.

The March of Reason.

There are certain pretended philosophers and wiseacres who, when you speak to them of the progress of mankind, shake their heads and talk of the good old days before steam was applied and the Morse telegraph invented. Away with such humbug! The great discoveries which have enriched mankind; united by a wire link great nations separated by mighty seas, dwarfed Space with Speed, and reduced disease to its minimum, cannot by any exercise of ingenuity be demonstrated to be aught by blessings.

Among the sanatory discoveries of the nineteenth century is one, that in view of the salutary influence it has exerted, deserves a foremost place. We allude to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is one of the most deservedly celebrated tonics and alteratives of the present day. The most unimpeachable testimony establishes the fact that this popular medicated stimulant and corrective annihilates indigestion, constipation, urinary complaints, malarial disorders, and many affections of the sensative organs. In the mining regions and new clearings of the West, it is regarded by the inhabitants as an indispensable means of preventing, as well as curing chills and fever, and there is scarcely a city or town in the Union, some of whose denizens have not borne witness to its efficacy in remedying the first named class of maladies.

As an invigorant, appetizer and carminative, Hostetter's Bitters are incomparably the most effective and the purest. Their basis of fine old rye, the most healthful alcoholic spirit obtainable, is of itself no mean tonic, but its strengthening properties are increased fifty fold by the vegetable extracts which it holds in solution, and to which the surpassing quality of the Bitters are due.

The South to Her Children.

BY MARGARET J. PRESTON.

have smoothed from my forehead its sadness,
'Tis over—thank Heaven therefor!
I would hide now with garments of gladness
The sackcloth and ashes of war,

Not a word of the past! It has perished—
Gone down in its beauty and gloom;
Yet because it so proudly was cherished,
Shall we sigh out our years at its tomb?

But the beauty and the honor undaunted,
Still steadfast and stern as can be;
By the laurels a Jackson has planted—
By the hopes that we buried with Lee;

Let us wrest from the future the guerdons
That to resolute purpose belong;
Let us fling from our spirits their burdens
And acquit us like men and be strong!

I bring you, compatriots, brothers,
(As largess ye dare not disdain,
Like Nature's that bountiful mother's),
Savannas as smooth as the main!

My valleys shall whiten all over
With snow never born of the cold;
And grain, like Midas shall cover
Every slope that it touches with gold.

The click of the artizan's hammer
Shall scare from the forest its gloom;
In the brake shall the water-fowl's clamor
Be drowned by the crush of the loom!

Then up from your torpor, ye sleepers!
The dream ye are dreaming deceives;
Go forth to the fields with the reapers,
And gather the prodigal sheaves!

With flocks gladden meadow and mountain,
With tinkling herds speckle each hill,
And blend with the splash of the fountain
The rumble and roar of the mill.

STRAW BURNING ATTACHMENT.

KING'S PATENT.

The Only Successful Burner Yet Introduced.

Having secured the Exclusive Right to Manufacture and Attach to Engines J. R. KING'S PATENT STRAW BURNING ATTACHMENT, I respectfully invite the attention of Threshers to it in order that they may notice why it is Superior to all other Straw Burning Engines. They are so constructed as to burn Wood, Coal or Straw, and require one-third less fuel than any other burner; can be changed to burn either in five minutes, thus avoiding the loss of time, and favoring threshers in localities where it is necessary to burn coal or wood. It is easy to keep up the necessary amount of steam with straw as fuel, and does not require an experienced person to fire it. Boys with but little instruction have fired them the whole season, and in many cases the engineer has done it and attended his engine. They have given entire satisfaction in every case, as the following, from among many testimonials, will prove:

STOCKTON, Oct. 4th, 1875.

Mr. J. R. King—Dear Sir: I consider it my duty to state that the Straw Burner you attached to my Hoadley Engine has exceeded my expectation. It furnished all the power that was needed to run my 36-inch Pitt Separator, and with less trouble than my wood burner. I consider I gave it a thorough test, as I threshed near the tules as well as on the upland, and found no trouble in using the straw. I have examined regular straw-burning engines while in operation, and would not exchange under any consideration, as I can burn wood, coal, or straw, and only require one man to fire and run the engine. Knowing that your Straw Burner is a decided success, I respectfully remain, Yours, etc.,

W. H. GILMORE.

MODESTO, Feb. 4th, 1876.

Mr. J. R. King—Dear Sir: Do not hesitate to give to the public the facts of our experience with your Straw Burner Attachment. We used one of them on an Automatic Hoadley Engine, in October, 1874, to run a barley mill in Modesto, using old straw as fuel. We had no trouble in getting sufficient power although it required a third more power to run it than a threshing separator. We also used it in the field last season, and experienced no difficulty from the first. Yours, etc.,

MAZE BROS.

MODESTO, CAL., October 30, 1875.

Mr. J. R. King—Dear Sir—I cheerfully state that I have in use two of your Straw Burner Attachments, and that they are all you claimed for them. I used it through last threshing season, and also one in running my Barley Mill. (30 inch stone.) Could do better work using straw than wood or coal. My engineer fired and attended the engine. Yours, etc.,

C. L. LEAVENSWORTH.

Parties wishing the attachment would do well to send in their orders early, so they can be accommodated in due time. Full directions for running will be given with each attachment, and all attachments warranted, and started in the field when necessary. If any engine should need any repairing it will be done as cheaply as elsewhere.

THE ATTACHMENT

Can be seen at H. C. Shaw Plow Co's Warehouse, Stockton, and at their Branch Store at Cressey Station, Merced County.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE, SACRAMENTO, September 21st, 1875.

MR. J. ENRIGHT—Dear Sir:—The Straw Burning Engine I bought of you, and which was used in Yolo county, has given us perfect satisfaction. It is everything you represented. We have had no difficulty in generating all the steam required, and the amount of straw consumed can hardly be missed. We find it much safer, on account of fire, than a wood burner. Many persons, both threshers and farmers, have come to see it run, and all express themselves highly pleased. The opinion of all was, that it is just what we need, being safe and economical.

ROCK SOAP!

ROCK SOAP is a natural product, possessing most marvelous cleansing and cosmetic properties. Besides other saponaceous substances it contains Alumina, which is more powerfully detersive than most Alkaline Soaps. Rock Soap is ascertained by analysis to have detersive properties valuable to an eminent degree for the purpose for which it is recommended, and to contain nothing injurious for such use. After using it no one will be without it. It is perfectly marvelous in its operation.

For Household Purposes.

It cleans kitchen utensils, glass, and tinware; polishes gold and silver; removes oil and grease from tables and floors. It is a great saving of time and labor.

San Francisco Market Review.

The topic most interesting to trade circles at present seems to be the weather, and its bearing on the growing crops. The April showers have been most timely, and reports from all parts of the State are of a most favorable character. The United States Signal Service officers stationed at this city, report the rainfall for the season to date as 30.87 inches, against 19.08 inches for the same period last year.

The silver panic seems to have become a thing of the past, which is doubtless in part owing to the shrewdness of the Chinese merchants here, who, taking advantage of the heavy discount on Trade Dollars, bought large quantities for shipment to China, thereby realizing a large profit. This action on the part of the Chinese has caused the Trade Dollar to disappear almost entirely, and has also appreciated its value,—at the close brokers were buying at 94c. and selling at 95c. Silver coin 2@3 per cent. discount; Legal Tender buying at 89¼ and selling at 89¾. The treasure shipments to the Orient per Oceanic were as follows:

Gold Coin	$ 6,689
Silver Bars	10,800
Trade Dollars	167,810
Mexican Dollars	16,834
Total	$202,133

The trade in cereals has been extremely light for the week under review, there being no demand for either Barley or Wheat. Oats have shaded off and Corn is dull and prices are lower. The Hop market has been stagnant, but prices are steady as last given. The Eastern market shows more activity as will be seen from the following extract from a late number of Emmet Wells' New York Hop Circular:

"Under the influence of continued liberal call for export and comparatively light receipts, prices have been well sustained, and the general market has a very healthful tone. Eighteen cents has been freely paid for choice shipping Hops, though very little of this stock is on offer, holders refusing in most cases to sell. As it is some time since we indulged in statistics in the Circular, we give the following figures as our views of the situation:

	Bales.
Exports from New York City since Sept. 1	38,000
Gone to brewers from New York City dealers,	25,000
Stock on hand to-day in New York City	12,000
Total receipts into N. Y. City since Sept. 1	75,000
Sales by country dealers direct to brewers	38,000
Exports from other ports than New York	7,000
Stock in growers' and country dealers' hands to-day	20,000
Total growth of 1875	140,000

Assuming that the above figures are correct, it will be seen that there is a supply on hand to-day of 20,000 bales in the country, and 12,000 bales in this city—total, 32,000 bales. Our brewers will want at least 17,000 bales more to carry them down to the new crop; which, added to what they have already had, will make a consumption of 80,000 bales for the season. Now add exports, 45,000 bales, and we have a total of 125,000 bales, leaving a surplus of 15,000 bales to carry over into the new season, provided no more Hops are shipped to Europe. The consumption may reach 5,000 or 10,000 more than we have it, though if one could hear brewers complain of the dull times, slow sales and poor collections, 80,000 bales might be considered nearly correct."

The Hawaiian treaty has been a subject of much discussion among our merchants, and not long since, at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, that body unanimously voted that it was necessary for the interests of this Coast that the treaty be passed, and a telegram to that effect was dispatched to our Representatives in Congress. There seems to be a good prospect that the treaty will be confirmed. Meanwhile trade is suffering from the lack of needed supplies of sugar, and the recently reported loss of the British ship Liberator, from Manila, with sugar for this port, still further complicates matters.

FLOUR—The local demand is moderate, but for export lots there is but little inquiry. Quotations are as follows: Shipping lots of Extra, $5@5 75 ₱ bbl in half or qr sks; jobbing at $6@6 62½ as to brand. Superfine, $4 75@5.

WHEAT—During the week under review the market has steadily drooped, and at the close prices were weak at quotations as given below. Millers seem to be well supplied, and at current rates here and in Liverpool there is no profit to shippers, who are therefore out of the market. Two ships have been taken for new crop loading; the St. John, Smith, for Liverpool, at £3 2s 6d for July loading, and the Tam O'Shanter for Cork, at £3 5s for August loading. The receipts for the week have been 40,001 ctls., against 77,713 ctls. last week. We quote the range for Shipping at $1 70@1 80; Milling, $1 70@1 85; the latter being an extreme figure for strictly choice.

BARLEY—Receipts for the week, 13,206 ctls., last week 12,767 ctls.; total since January 1st, 233,773 ctls. The offerings during the week have been liberal, but prices continue weak under a light demand. Quotations are as follows: Coast Feed, $1 15@1 22½; Bay Feed, $1 20@1 25, the latter figure for extra choice parcels; Brewing, $1 30@1 35; Chevalier, $1 25@1 45 ₱ ctl.

OATS—Receipts for the week, 5,034 ctls.; last week, 5,164 ctls. During the week several carloads of Omaha oats have been placed at $2 15@2 20 ₱ ctl. At the close, in the absence of any particular demand, prices favor the buyer. The range is from $2 15@2 80, the latter figure for choice Surprise.

HAY—Choice lots of Wheat hay are held at $18 50@19 50 ₱ ton, while other grades are moderately active at $13@17 ₱ ton for fair to choice. Receipts for the week, 1,546 tons, making a total from January 1st to date, of 14,283 tons.

STRAW—Prices are unchanged at 60@65 cts ₱ bale, as to quality.

POTATOES—Receipts for the week, 19,904 sks. The market is weak, and outside quotations are obtainable for strictly choice lots only. We quote Sacramento River, $1 75@2; Humboldt, $1 50@2, Petaluma and Tomales, $1 90@2 ₱ ctl.

ONIONS—Supplies are light and prices are firm at $2 75@3 for Union City; Stockton, $2@2 50; Oregon, $1@1 75 ₱ ctl. Receipts for the week, 116 sks against 1,709 sks last week.

BRAN—Millers have advanced the price to $20 00 per ton.

MIDDLINGS—Millers now ask $25 00 ₱ ton.

OIL-CAKE MEAL—Quotable at $37 50 ₱ ton to the trade from mill.

RYE—Quotable at $1 75@$1 80 ₱ ctl from wharf.

CORN—Receipts for the week 6,480 ctls. against 5,074 ctls last week. The demand is light and prices are weak. We quote at $1 15@1 17½; Small round corn at $1 40@1 42½ ₱ ctl.

CORNMEAL—Feed from mills is selling at $30 00 @31 00 ₱ ton. Table varieties, 2½@3c ₱ lb.

SEEDS—The stock of mustard seed is exhausted and prices nominal. The oil mill takes Flax at 3@ 3½c ₱ lb; Mustard, brown, 2@3c; do, white, 1½@2½c; Alfalfa, 12@16c; Canary, 1@2½c.

BUCKWHEAT—Nominal at 3c ₱ lb.

BEANS—Receipts for the week 1,528 sks, against 6,074 sks last week. Bayos continue scarce and wanted. We quote as follows: Bayo, $5 00; Butter, $2 00@$2 30, as to size; White, small, $2 00@2 10; Pea, $2 05; Pink and Red, $2 37½@2 62½ ₱ ctl.

FRUIT—The demand for Apples is light and prices are lower. Tahiti and Messina Oranges are abundant. Strawberries of fine quality are plentiful. We quote: Apples, $2 00@4 00 per bx; Limes, $10 00@15 per M; Los Angeles Lemons, $25 00@30 00 ₱ M; Sicily do., $8 00@9 ₱ box; Bananas, $2 00@ 3 50 ₱ bunch; Los Angeles Oranges, $30 00@$75 00 per M. Strawberries, 18@25c ₱ lb.

VEGETABLES—Cabbages, 50c@$1 00 ₱ ctl; Marrow-fat Squash, $25 00 ₱ ton; Asparagus, 50@75c per bx; Peas, 2@4c ₱ lb.

NUTS—Cocoanuts, $7@8 ₱ 100; Eastern Chestnuts, 12½@15c ₱ lb; Chile Walnuts, 11@12½c; California do, 7@10c; Peanuts, 9½@10c, as to quality.

DRIED FRUIT—Apples, 6@8c in sks; Peaches, 10@12½c; Peeled, 18@20c; Pears, 9@12½c; Plums, 5@8; do. pitted, 14@20c; Figs, white, 10@12½c; black do, 6@8c. California Raisins, 9@12½c.

HONEY—White Comb in frames 18@20c; white strained, 10@12½c; dark, 7@8c ₱ lb.

BEESWAX—Selling from 27½@30 ₱ lb.

PROVISIONS—Eastern Hams, 15½@17c; California do 13½@14½c; do Bacon, 15@16½c; California Lard, 14½c ₱ lb for 10-lb tins, and 15c for 5-lb.

BUTTER AND CHEESE—336,160 lbs, last week 270,810 lbs. As will be seen by comparing the above, the receipts have been excessive, and in consequence prices droop. A few parcels of strictly choice bring our outside quotation, but such kinds are extremely scarce. Cheese is in large supply and dull at quotations. We quote: Butter 20@27½c ₱ lb for fresh roll; 18@22½c for pickled do; California firkin, 25c; Eastern and Western do, 18@25; Cheese, California, 13@14c; Martin's Eastern Cream, 18@20c; Block, 22½c; Sage, 22½c; Pine-apple, $6 00 ₱ case.

EGGS—The market is dull and prices lower. Choice California are weak at 26@27½c; Oregon, —; Eastern, 20@22½c ₱ dozen.

POULTRY—The market remains steady at quotations. We quote: Hens, $9 00@10 00; Roosters, $10 @11 00; Broilers, $7 00@9 00 ₱ doz; Tame Ducks, $10 @12; Tame Geese, $3 00@3 50 ₱ pair; Live Turkeys 20@21c ₱ lb.

GAME—The kinds now in season are quotable as follows: Hare, $1 50@$2 00 per doz; Rabbits, $1@1 50; English Snipe, $2 00@3 00; Common do, $1 00@$1 25; Small Birds, 50@75c.

HIDES—We quote California dry, usual selections, at 12½@14c ₱ lb; Wet Salted, 6@7c, as to weight.

HOPS—Elsewhere we give an interesting review of the Eastern market. The market here is quiet at 10@13c ₱ lb, though some small lots of strictly choice for home consumption have brought 14c.

WOOL—During the week about 500,000 lbs have been sold at our quotations. The best free, long staple, Southern wools, in light condition, still command 18c, but such lots are scarce. Light free wools of six and eight months' growth, sell at 16c; while heavy lots of that description are selling at 12½@ 14c. The range for burry wools is 10@15c, according to condition, length of staple, and extent of burr. All but the best clips, both of long and short staple, are exceedingly hard to sell, and offers are now accepted, which last week would not have been entertained. Defective parcels of all kinds cannot be sold within 1½c of prices heretofore current. The demand on the whole is less active than it has been, and is confined to only two or three buyers, while many have not entered the market and can only be induced to take hold by a lower range of prices.

Hygenic Notes.

COLD FEET.

Cold feet are the precursors of consumption. To escape them, warm your feet well in the morning, and covering the sole with a piece of common paper, carefully draw on the stocking, and then the boot or shoe.

FOR CROUP.

Take a knife or grater, and grate or shave in small particles a teaspoonful of alum; mix it with about twice its quantity of sugar, to make it palatable, and administer it as quickly as possible. Its effects will be truly magical, as almost instantaneous relief will be afforded.

BRONCHITIS.

A simple, but oftentimes efficacious remedy is this. It may afford relief: Syrup of tolu, one ounce; syrup of squills, half an ounce; wine of ipecac, two drachms; mucilage of gum arabic, one and a half ounces. Mix. Take a teaspoonful three times a day.

WEAK EYES.

Bathe your eyes night and morning in a tolerably strong solution of salt and water. We have known some remarkable cures effected by this simple remedy. After bathing the eyes daily for about a week, intermit a day or two, and then resume the daily bathing, and so on until your eyes get strong again.

A Beautiful Parlor Ornament.—A beautiful ornament for the sitting-room can be made by covering a common glass tumbler with moss, the latter fastened in place by sewing-cotton wound around. Then glue dried moss upon a saucer, into which set the tumbler, filling it and the remaining space in the saucer with loose earth from the woods. Plant the former with a variety of ferns, and the latter with wood violets. On the edge of the grass also plant some of the nameless little evergreen vine, which bears red (scarlet) berries, and whose dark, glossy, ivy-like foliage will trail over the fresh blue and white of the violets with beautiful effect.

Another good plan is, to fill a rather deep plate with some of the nameless but beautiful silvery and light green and delicate pink mosses, which are met with in profusion in all swamps and marshes. This can be kept fresh and beautiful as long as it is not neglected to water it profusely once a day. It must, of course, be placed in the shade, or the moss will blanch and die. In the center of this a clump of large azure violets should be placed, adding some curious lichens and pretty fungus growth from the barks of forest trees, and a few cones, shells and pebbles.

Chicken Salad.—Take the meat from a pair of boiled chickens. Chicken, as well as celery, should be cut as large as a cranberry. Have equal quantities of choppen chicken and celery—if anything, more of the celery. Take a level tablespoonful of dry mustard and rub it very smooth with the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs, and the yolks of two raw eggs. Then pour on very slowly, stirring all the time, one-third of a large bottle of salad oil alternating with the juice of one large lemon, or two smaller ones; then add a large tablespoonful of salt and two or three tablespoonfuls of rich cream. Just before serving, mix the chicken well through this dressing; then add the celery. You may garnish the top with the tender leaves of the celery, very thin slices of lemon, a few capers here and there, and a half dozen stoned olives. Some add half a teaspoonful of cayenne pepper to the dressing, while others object to it.—Country Gentlenan.

Cocoanut Candy.—Rasp very fine a sound cocoanut, spread it on a dish, and let it dry naturally for three days, as it will not bear the heat of an oven, and is too oily for use when freshly broken. Four ounces will be sufficient for a pound of sugar for most tastes, but more can be used at pleasure. Boil the sugar as for the orange-flower candy, and when it begins to be very thick and white, strew in the nut, stir and mix it well, and do not quit it for an instant until it is finished. The pan should not be placed upon the fire, but over it, as the nut is liable to burn with too fierce a heat. For almond-candy proceed in exactly the same way, but let the almonds, either whole or split, be perfectly well dried in a gentle oven, and do not throw them into the sugar until it approaches the candying point.

Stewed Fruit.—Almost any fruit well stewed may be given to children, but some, from being too often repeated, will be declined by them. This is often the case with stewed rhubarb, and it should therefore occasionally be mixed with other fruit. A tablespoonful or two of raspberry or strawberry jam, a little orange or lemon marmalade, will raise the flavor agreeably. Rhubarb and apples are best prepared for eating with rice or macaroni by gentle boiling in a stew pan until tender and tolerably dry; sugar to taste should then be added, and stirred with the fruit over the fire for five or ten minutes. In the case of the acid in fruit being very strong, it is well, before adding the sugar, to put in a small pinch of carbonate of soda; much less sugar need then be used.

A Texan's Tale.

It was a calm, beautiful morning in the month of October, that my friend Bob Morton and myself mounted our horses and rode up to the north bank of the South Platte on a hunt after buffaloes. The Platte River at St. Vrain's, makes a great bend—the river about the fort running almost due north, and turning almost due east at the foot. We thought we would ride up the river a few miles, and then, striking northward into the broad, open prairie, where we should be most likely to find our game, return by a short cut across the prairie to the fort.

We rode up the river until almost noon, seeing many deer and wolves—for one could hardly ride through this tall grass a mile without seeing them—yet, as we were not looking after this kind of game, we paid no attention to them until nearly noon, when feeling somewhat tired and hungry, Bob, who was an excellent shot, killed a fine buck; and, dismounting, we made a most delicious meal on the young and tender vension.

Mounting, after dinner, we struck northwest across the broad prairie, where, with the exception of the tall grass, there was not a tree or shrub on all that vast expanse, except along the river bank.

It was four o'clock in the afternoon, just as we were beginning to get discouraged, and we were thinking of turning our horses heads towards home, when we discovered the object of our search. There were two buffaloes quietly feeding on a little rise in the prairie—the first rise we had discovered since leaving the river.

"Hurrah, Fred!" exclaimed Bob, putting spurs to his horse and getting excited. "Now for the sport, and buffaloes tongues for supper!" and away he went at a reckless, break-neck speed.

Our game was a long distance off when first discovered, and had disappeared over the rise in the prairie, and was out of sight.

We agreed to separate as soon as we reached the top of the ridge, and each take our game, and charge down upon them, and capture both if possible.

As we came dashing up to the top of the hill they discovered us, and immediately took to flight. Buffaloes can run very fast, notwithstanding their weight; they seem to gather momentum as they proceed, and are not easily run down. We made our choice immediately, and gave pursuit.

My horse was fleet, but the tall grass tangled his feet, and I had a long, hard chase before I came up with my game. I paid no attention to Bob; his game had taken a different direction from mine, and we were soon widely separated.

After a hard chase, I came near enough, I thought, to venture a shot—perhaps, if I did not kill him I could cripple him, and thus stop him somewhat in his mad career. I brought my rifle to my shoulder quickly; but as I fired, my horse stumbled slightly, his feet having become tangled in the grass, and I missed my aim, but struck the beast in the shoulder instead of the heart; and the ball being large, made a terrible wound, from which the blood flowed in a stream.

This maddened him; and turning quickly, he charged with a terrible half snort and half roar down upon me. My horse was taken by surprise and frightened; and, in springing partly to one side, as if to turn suddenly and fly away from the mad creature, his feet caught in the tangled grass, and he fell, throwing me many feet over his head.

The fall did not hurt me, and I was on my feet in an instant; but before I could reach my horse, he was up and bounding over the prairie, leaving me to my fate.

I had no time to think whether I fancied the situation or not, for the mad bull was upon me almost; and with a look of despair after my flying horse, I ran, I knew not whither, but with an instinct of self-preservation.

All this happened in an instant. I had hoped the maddened creature would pursue my horse; but not so—the buffalo knows well who is his worst enemy. I was fleet on foot, for I had run for my life many times; but the tall grass impeded my progress, and I knew I could hold out but a few moments.

I saw not the slightest chance for my life. Here I was, upon this broad ocean of prairie; Bob was I knew not where, nor had I time to look; the grass tangling my feet and taking away my strength, and a wounded buffalo within a few yards of me, and gaining upon me at every bound.

I thought of my revolver, and that I would sell my life as dearly as possible. I always carried it in my belt; and perhaps I could throw it over my shoulder and shoot him in the eye. I had no hope of the ball doing him any harm if it hit anywhere else; for these animals have a thick mass of hair on their forehead, that is so matted together with sand and dirt, that no ball from a rifle will penetrate it. I knew, if a ball from my revolver struck his forehead, it would have no more effect than the wind blowing against it.

I put my hand to my belt; but my revolver was gone, the scabbard was empty. It had probably fallen out when I was thrown from my horse.

It was with a feeling somewhat of despair that I found it gone. It seemed as if there was nothing but death before me; for how could I hope to escape from, or cope successfully with, a wounded buffalo—wounded, as I knew, in no vital part, but sufficient to madden him.

I could hear more plainly his half grunt and half snort close upon my heels—could feel his very breath upon my back; in another instant he would be upon me—would pierce me with his short, stumpy horns—would grind me to the earth with his monster head, and trample me beneath his feet. I indeed felt that my time had come—that no earthly power could save me; and instinctively I breathed a prayer to heaven.

At that instant my feet became entangled, and I fell; the maddened creature had just touched me as I went down, and was under such terrible headway that he passed directly over me without touching me. As his tail brushed over my face I grasped it, and was dragged to my feet, as the buffalo, stopping suddenly, attempted to turn upon me. But I had a new lease of my life. I held on to his tail with a death-grasp, and was dragged round and round.

You may smile, but the tail-hold was my best hold now, and my only hope of life; and I held on with a grim determination, while the bull wheeled round and round, roared, snorted and pawed the ground in his terrible rage, but could not shake me off.

But what should I do now? I knew I could not hold to him long, as my strength was nearly exhausted, having run so before I fell.

His wound was bleeding profusely, and my hope was that he might become exhausted first; but he seemed far from that now, while I seemed very near to it. I knew my strength could hold out but little longer; but to let go was certain death.

The bull would suddenly take a freak, and run and bellow with all its might, dragging me with velocity—then he would stop, and with a terrific snort attempt to turn on me, and it was more than I could do, with my failing strength, to keep out of his way, and several times his horns rent my clothing.

This state of things could not continue; I was growing weaker, and felt my hold relaxing. I was jerked hither and thither, my arms nearly pulled from their sockets—worried almost to death, and about to lose my hold—when, as the mad creature paused an instant, the sharp crack of a rifle rang out upon the air, and the huge creature gave one plunge, and fell upon his side in the death-struggle.

I was safe, but it came not a moment too soon. I, too, fell to the ground, more dead than alive. The sequel is soon told. It was Bob who had saved me. He had been more fortunate than I, and after a hard chase, had killed his game, and then looked round for me. The first thing he saw was my horse without a rider, and thus discovered me in the distance clinging to the bull's tail for dear life; and putting spurs to his horse, he came to my assistance. It was some time before he could venture to shoot, for fear of hitting me; but he finally succeeded in planting a ball directly in the animal's breast.

The Lost Satchel.

She came from South Bend, and when she got off the train she discovered that her big satchel had not come along with the baggage. She flourished her check under the baggage-master's nose, and loudly demanded "that satch-eel," and after a long hunt he was forced to say—

"Madam, there is some mistake. I'm very sorry, but that satchel is sure to come on the next train."

"Do you s'pose I'm going to wait around here till to-morrer," she indignantly responded, pushing the check under his eyes.

"You can go on, and we will forward it to you, madam."

"I'd look purty going on and leaving that satchel to foller," she exclaimed. "Every dud I've got in the world, 'cept these on my back, are in it, and I'm going to have 'em or this road will get sued!"

He made another search, failed to find it, and said—

"It must have been left, but it's sure to come."

"Where's the boss of this road?" she demanded, waving her check around. "I'm going to see if I am to be defrauded of a satchel chuck full of as good clothes as any woman of my age in Indiana ever put on."

The man pointed down the depot, and she walked up to the ticket office and called at the agent.

"See here, mister, I want forty dollars or my satchel."

"I don't know anything about your satchel," he replied.

"You don't eh?" she said, throwing down the big brass check. "What's that?"

"A check, madam."

"Yes, a check for my satchel, and now the satchel can't be found! It's probably bin stolen, but I know everything in it. There was three chemises with ruffles around the top; one new nightgown; two pairs of stockings darned in the heels; one gray dress which cost twenty-eight cents a yard in South Bend; another nightgown torn in the back; two checks—"

"It was detained, and will be here on the next train," he interrupted.

"But I'm bound for Oswego, and I don't care for any of your next trains!" she snapped.

"Well, you'll have to see some one else; I have nothing to do with the baggage."

"I will see some one else, young man! I'll have the man who bosses this road, and I'll have my satchel or the pay for it, or I'll have the whole crowd of you in jail!"

Turning away, she caught sight of a policeman, and bearing down on him, she said—

"Be you a police?"

"Yes'm."

"Well, then, I want the railroad arrested. They have stolen my satchel."

"Oh, I guess you'll find it all right," he replied. "Baggage is frequently lost, but always turns up right again. You have the check all right?"

"Yes, and I can remember every article in it. There is a nightgown, torn in the back; there is a bottle of hair invigorator that was never uncorked; there's one new nightgown, with ruffle around the top; there's two yards of flannel for my daughter's baby; there's a white envelope; there's a bottle of goose ile, there's—"

"Oh, well, it'll come along," interrupted the officer.

"And I've got to wait?"

"Yes, or go on and let them send it."

"I vum, if I will!" she said, pushing the check into his ear; "I'm going to have that satchel or the pay for it! I'd look purty landing in Oswego with these old duds on, wouldn't I?"

"Well, I can't help you."

"Then I'll help myself! The Wilkinsons never did let any one impose on 'em yet, and we sha'n't 'low it now."

She got a boy to show her up stairs to the general offices, and walking into the superintendent's room, she asked—

"Be you the boss of this road?"

"I'm the superintendent," he replied.

"You see that check?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's my satchel check. The satchel haint here; it's bin stolen or lost. I want forty dollars right away."

"You'll have to see the baggage master, then, madam."

"I'll see nobody! That satchel has bin hooked as sure as you are born, but I can identify it. I know everything in it. There was a nightgown, perfectly new, made of yard wide goods; there was a bottle of hair refrigerator; there was a night gown with a hole in the back; there was a—"

At this moment the baggage master came up and informed her that the lost satchel had been found under a great pile of trunks, and she arose and remarked—

"Well, that's all right. I was bound to have that satchel or put the whole caboodle of ye where you couldn't break out!"

And parading up and down the depot, with the big satchel under her arm, her eyes wore a look of proud triumph.

Too Much Medicine.—Some one, writing on the excessive use of medicine and the recuperative power of Nature, says:—It would be utterly impossible to tell how many constitutions have been impaired, how many digestions ruined, how many complexions spoiled, and how many purses emptied, through medicine. What is that you say—that a stitch in time saves nine, and that the right medicine quickly taken averts danger? Very likely. I quite believe that. But in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, where is the danger? and what is the emergency of the case? Medicine is often the precursor of after misery; and the poor constitution has to pay dearly for its medicinal fillip. The wiser philosophy of the present day is gradually delivering us from these potent perils. Nature has a self-righting power within her; there is a kind of vis-medicatrix in the physical frame. Treat the body kindly; let as much pure air as possible get to the lungs, and as much fresh water as possible be applied to the flesh, and as much healthy exercise as duty permits be given to the muscles, and early rising as circumstances allow be afforded for the recruitment of the brain, and then medicine will be a very avoidable affair.

What a Plant Did.—A little plant was given to a sick girl; in trying to take care of it, the family made changes in their way of living. First, they cleaned the window that more light might come in to its leaves; then, when not too cold, they would open the window so that fresh air might help the plant to grow strong; and thus purify their own lungs as well. Next, the clean window made the rest of the room look so untidy they used to wash the floor and walls, and arrange the furniture more neatly. That led the father of the family to try to mend a broken chair or two, which kept him at home several evenings. After the work was done, he stayed at home instead of spending his leisure in a bar-room; and the money thus saved went to buy comforts for them all. And then as their home grew attractive, the whole family loved it and each other better than ever before, and grew healthier and happier with their flowers. Thus, the little plant brought a moral as well as a physical blessing.

Apoplexy and Intoxication.—The British Medical Journal speaks of the difficulty often existing in distinguishing between intoxication and fatal apoplexy. Apoplexy from cerebral hemorrage imitates not only the comatose stage of drunkenness, but occasionally the "uproarious" form, when the drunkard seems determined to show what can be done in the line of noise. A recent case exemplifies this remark. A gentleman was found lying in the gutter by a policeman, and as the gentleman sang "Tommy, make way for your uncle," and also said part of the Lord's Prayer, he was supposed to be drunk, and was taken to the police office. Later on, as he seemed to be in a fit, he was sent to a hospital, and died there next morning of apoplexy from disease of the brain. Dr. Hughling Jackson has recorded the case of a man who, during fatal coma, elaborately twirled his moustache. It was afterwards found that this was a very common trick of his.

The Housekeeper gives the following suggestions for utilizing old tin cans. Take off the top of the can, punch holes on opposite sides near the rim, put in a wire bail, and you have a little bucket, which may serve for a paint pot, to keep nails in, or other handy purposes. Take off the top, cut to the proper shape, and fasten on a handle by means of a screw through a hole in the bottom, and a useful scoop may be made. A saucepan for small messes may be made by cutting down a can, leaving a strip to be bent at right angles, and turned round a stick, to serve as a handle. A coarse grater for crackers, etc., is easily formed from a piece of tin fastened to a board. The holes in the grater should me made with an old three-cornered file.

Good-By.

BY FLORA MARCIAN.

Our parting time has come, my friend,
The longest day must have its end;
Ours long and sweet at last has run
Its diamond grains to the last one.

Fate beckons and compelleth me,
Dividing me this night from thee;
The land fogs creep to meet the sea,
The sea fogs greet them sullenly.

Quick, let me grasp thy friendly hand,
My ship is loosening from the land;
Good night, good-by, let thy lips meet
My own once more in kisses sweet.

Cheer thee, my friend, for leagues away
From shore the night will turn to-day,
And Summer lands will heave in sight,
Arrayed in palms or lilies white;

Fair isles by southern winds caressed
And harbors where the sailors rest,
Where I shall surely wait to see
Thee, love, for you will follow me.

Sailed To-Day.

Sailed to-day:
Faced the gray seas and white Winter skies,
None watching from the quay with straining eyes.

Sailed to-day:
Far in his distant home, sad faces bow
And whisper, "Is his ship unanchored now!"

Sailed to-day:
A tearless mother muses on the morn
They bade her cheer, because her boy was born.

Sailed to-day:
And those who loved him best urged on his flight,
The bitter message reached him but last night.

Sailed to-day:
With laugh and boon companions left behind
To mock him in the ghostly midnight wind.

Sailed to-day:
The day of loving parting is so sad,
But we have learned to think such day is glad.

Sailed to-day:
We mourn with torture-tears that drop within,
Whiten our hair, and wear our faces thin.

Sailed to-day:
O cold gray seas! O sullen Winter skies!
Will there be ever Summer in our eyes?

Sailed to-day:
Shall we not always feel this biting cold?
There is no Summer when the heart is old.

Sailed to-day:
Well, ships go out, but they come back again—
A day of joy completes long months of pain.

Sailed to-day:
And some ships go with lead and come with gold—
Sad hearts have hopes too daring to be told.

Sailed to-day:
O God! who to the farthest deep goes down,
Who knows the strangers in the foreign town.

Out of our reach is still in reach of you,
The God who cares for sparrows loves him who

A Reporter's Story.

I had been stopping for a short time in the city of Jackson, Michigan, engaged in the capacity of travelling reporter for one of the New York journals, when one rainy, disagreeable day, I resolved to visit the State's prison, in search of some items of interesting news. I did so.

After having passed through the entire establishment, I was at last shown into the cell of a young man doomed to suffer death.

The occupant of this cell was a fine, sad, intelligent-looking personage of about twenty-three years of age. His high, classical forehead, deep-blue eyes, and noble, polite bearing, indicated him to be no common villian. His face was thin and pallid, but from those pure, expressive eyes flashed a depth of character, an unendurable sorrow, a soul-destroying remorse, which no cold-blooded murderer could possess.

At his first words, "Pray, be seated," I was surprised at the deep, full, musical intonations of his voice. It at once proclaimed him a scholar.

I soon entered into a long conversation with him, and little by little learned the following sad, but truthful, tale, which I give as nearly as possible in his own language, and which I hope will prove a warning to many weary, foolhardy thousands who are swiftly drifting into that fearful, whirling, domestic vortex—jealousy.

My name is George Melville. My father was a clergyman in the western part of this State, and descended from one of the best families in those parts.

I received a good education, and, at the age of twenty, entered a large mercantile house in New York city. I soon, by close application and indefatigable energy, gained the entire confidence of my employers; and after having been in their service one year, I was selected by them to visit the West Indies as their agent on some business of importance, and which would require considerable tact and forethought to execute faithfully, and promptly transact.

Previous to my departure for those islands, I became acquainted with a Miss Reynolds, who was a few years younger than myself, and the daughter of a gentleman who had recently purchased and removed to an estate near my father's.

Everything that was graceful and lovely appeared centered in her form; everything that was virtuous and excellent in her mind. I sought her hand. Our souls soon became united by the indissoluble bonds of sincere love; and as there were no parental or other impediments to our union, it was agreed that as soon as I returned from the West Indies, where it was expected my stay would be short, the marriage solemnities would be performed. Solemn oaths of love and constancy passed between us, and I sailed with a light heart for the West Indies. While there, I received from her, and returned to her, letters filled with the tenderest expressions of anxiety and regret of absence. Oh, that I had never, never returned! What pain, anguish, and remorse I would have been saved.

The moment I got on land, I hastened as fast as the railway-train could carry me to the house of Mr. Reynolds, to see the charmer of my soul.

She received me with all the ardency of affection, and even shed tears of joy in my presence. I urged her to name the day which was to perfect our union and happiness; and the next Sunday, four days only distant, was agreed upon for me to lead her to the altar. How did my heart bound at the prospect of making Miss Reynolds my own, of possessing in her all that could render life agreeable!

I hastened home to my family, and informed them of my approaching bliss. They all sympathized in the anticipated joy which swelled my bosom. I had a sister some years older than myself, who had been the friend and companion of my angel in my absence. They were now almost every day together, so that I had frequent opportunity of Emma's company.

One day she had been with my sister, at my father's; and, as usual, I accompanied her home. On my return my sister requested me to attend her in a private room. We therefore retired, and when we were seated, she thus addressed me:

"Georgie, you know that to promote your peace, your welfare, and your happiness, has ever been the pride of my heart. Nothing except this could extort the sad secret which I now disclose, and which has hitherto remained deposited in my own bosom. My duty to a brother, whom I esteem dear as life, forbids me to remain silent. As an affectionate sister, I cannot tacitly see you thus imposed upon. I cannot see you the dupe and slave of an artful and insiduous woman, who does not sincerely return your love; nor can I see your marriage celebrated with one whose soul and affections are placed on another object."

Here she hesitated, while I, with anguish of mind almost insufferable begged her to proceed.

"About six or eight months after your departure," she continued, "it was reported to Miss Reynolds that she had a rival in the West Indies; that you had there found an English beauty on whom you lavished those endearments which belonged of right to her alone. This at first made a deep impression on her; and whether from this cause, from fickleness of disposition, or that she never sincerely loved you, I know not; but this I do know, that a youth has been for some time past her constant companion. To convince you of this, you need only visit the old, uninhabited house bordering on the river, about nine or ten this evening, when you will undoubtedly surprise Miss Reynolds and her lover, enjoying one of their pleasant, loving interviews. If I should be mistaken, I will submit to your censure; but should you find it as I have predicted, you have only to rush from your place of concealment, charge her with her perfidy, and renounce her forever."

Of all the plagues, of all the torments, of all the curses which torture the soul, jealousy of a rival in love is the worst.

Enraged, confounded, and astonished, it seemed as if my bosom would instantaneously burst. To conceal my emotions, I left my sister's apartments, after having thanked her for her information, and proceeded to obey her injunctions. I retired to my room, and there poured out my execrations.

"Cursed woman!" I cried, "is it thus you requite my tender love? Could a vague report of my inconsistency drive you to infidelity? Did not my letters breathe constant adoration, and did not yours portray the same sincerity of affection? No; it was that wretched passion for novelty which more or less holds a predominacy over your whole sex. To a new lover you will sacrifice your most sacred engagements, though made in the face of heaven!"

Thus did I rave through the entire day. The proceedings of that day are a vacuum in my memory. Every fiend in Hades were pointing their seared bony fingers at me, and with derisive sneering, laughter, and scarcastic tones were urging me on to "revenge."

Through the whole of that day I was a raviag, frantic maniac. I was hopelessly and incurably a victim of that worst of all passions, jealousy. Slowly the day wore away. At last the sun went down. Better for me had it been possible for that bright orb to have remained immovable for all time.

It was a beautiful Summer sunset. The fast receding rays, as they lingeringly rested upon the topmost crest of a distant mountain, engulfing its base in a pall-like gloom, and slantingly beamed upon the dancing, shimmering waves of the silent river, threw back a mixture of shade and sunshine which plainly told that night was approaching. Night, oh, fatal night!

All nature was clothed in its most pleasing garb. The carolling of the birds, the purling rivulets, grand old forest, majestic river, and twinkling stars were all lovely.

But in the midst of this soul-enchanting scenery appeared a cloud, a mere speck at first, but which rapidly increased. Bright sheets of lightning began to flash along the darkening heavens; and the low rumbling of distant thunder, resembling the harsh growling of ferocious beasts, announced the coming storm. Larger and larger grew the clouds; louder and louder pealed the thunder, while the lightening fairly flooded the gloomy heavens with a stream of electric light.

And there I sat in my room, occasionally giving vent to outbursts of demoniacal laughter. Black and terrible as was the scene without, it was nothing to the storm of raging passions that were howling in my breast. The storm continued. A deep, hollow, distant roar announced the approach of summoned winds. The whole forest bowed in awful grandeur, as from its dark bosom rushed the impetuous hurricane, twisting off, and tearing up by the roots, the stoutest trees, and whirling the heaviest branches through the air with irresistible fury.

Deep night now filled the atmosphere. The rain poured in torrents; the wind rocked the building, and bellowed in the adjacent groves; the river raged and roared; fierce lightning rent the heavens alternately, involving the world in the sheeted flame of its many colored fires; thunders burst with horrid din, bounding and reverberating among the surrounding woods, hills, and valleys, until it seemed nothing less than the crash of worlds resounding through the universe. The whole scene was majestically grand.

The clock struck the hour of ten. I sprang from my seat, and rushed into the street. The "trysting hour" had come, but the storm without had made me oblivious to the hell within. The scenes, externally and internally, were well-fitting to the black and damning deed I was that night destined to perform.

I was alone in the street. Not one of the hardy inhabitants of that town dared venture out on such an evening as that. On I went, with a burning fever consuming my inmost soul. On and on, unmindful of the terrible aspect of the raging elements. The boiling, seething, turbulent river, as it flowed angrily on, the howling winds, the lurid lightning, the loud bolts of thunder, were uncared for and unheeded by me. I arrived in view of the old house by the river side. I looked—all was dark, silent and gloomy. I closed my eyes, clenched my hands, and swore by the blackest heavens above me to be revenged.

I opened my eyes, and a bright, lurid, fantastic light was streaming from one of the lower windows. The light at first was so dazzingly brilliant that it almost blinded me. I crept stealthily up nearer to the window, and there witnessed a scene which paralyzed every fibre in my organization, and caused every drop of blood to congeal in my veins. I saw Miss Reynolds closely locked in the arms of a young man elegantly dressed, and of singularly delicate appearance. They were earnestly conversing in a low tone of voice, and the hand of my fair one was gently pressed in the hands of the stranger. I drew close to the window, applied my ear to a crevice, and, with the fury of pandemonium in my heart, I listened.

The stranger clasped Miss Reynolds in his arms.

"Dearest angel!" he exclaimed, "what an interruption to our bliss by the return of my hated rival!"

With very fond caresses and endearing blandishments, she replied, "Fear nothing. I have promised, and must yield him my hand; but you shall never be excluded from my heart. We shall find sufficient opportunities for private conference."

I could hear no more. My brain was on fire; and, rushing from my concealment, I, with a bound, sprang through the window and confronted them.

"Ungrateful and false-hearted woman!" I exclaimed, "is it thus you return my idolatrous love? You have deserted me; you have perjured your most sacred vows; and thus am I avenged!"

And placing a pistol at her breast, I shot her through the heart; and turning to her companion,—"And thou, perfidious contaminator and destroyer of my bliss, go attend thy companion in iniquity, a death too good for so foul a crime!"—and immediately drawing my knife, I stabbed him to the hilt in the breast.

With the words, "Oh, George! Your wife, your sister!" he fell fainting to the floor.

My God! That voice! It rang in my ear like a funeral knell! It rings to-day, and will continue to ring a requiem of agonizing remorse as long as time shall last.

It was, indeed, my betrothed wife; it was, indeed, my beloved sister. The one lay dead before me, the other weltering in her blood.

I raised my sister's head into my lap. In a faint and dying voice she told that, in a weak moment, they had concerted this plan to test my jealousy. She had dressed in male attire, intending, as soon as I had discovered them, to reveal herself, and laugh at my discomfiture.

"Forgive me, George," she pleaded, earnestly,—"forgive me! A mad, unwomanly freak has robbed me of the happiness of a lifetime."

She said no more, for, with her arms entwined lovingly around her murderer's neck she, without a struggle, was wafted on angel's wings to her Creator. What words can describe such agony, such utter desolation as mine! By one rash act I had robbed myself of more than life, and I would not live to endure such bitter remorse as mine. I placed my pistol to my head; but ere I could fire, my arm was grasped by a hand of steel, and the weapon dashed upon the ground.

My firing had awakened those living close by, and they came just in time to save me the crime of a triple murder.

I made no resistance, and was conveyed to prison, there to await my trial, which came off two months ago. I was condemned to death. My execution will take place in four weeks from to-morrow. I shall cheerfully meet my fate, for who would endure life when rendered so peculiarly miserable?

The wretched Melville here ended his tale of woe. No tears moistened his eyes; his grief was too despairing for tears; it preyed upon his heart, drank the vital streams of his life; and burst in convulsive sighs from his burning bosom.

The day appointed for his execution drew near; his past and approaching fate filled my breast with sympathetic sorrow.

He saw his venerable father, his mother, his friends and acquaintances, with several pious clergymen, who entered his cell to comfort him. His mind softened by their advice and counsel. Frequently would he burst into tears. Often in the solitary hours of the night was he heard addressing the Throne of Grace for mercy and forgiveness.

But the grief that prayed at his heart had wasted him to a mere skeleton. A slow but fatal fever had consequently implanted itself in his constitution. Exhausted nature could make but a weak struggle against disease and affliction like his; and about a week previous to the day appointed for his execution he expired in his mother's arms, with the name of his loved and lost one upon his lips—leaving a conclusive, incontrovertible evidence of the evil influences of jealousy.

THE Supreme Court at Washington refuses to recognize female attorneys, although cases in charge of women attorneys have been sent up from the inferior courts.

A Woman on Agricultural Employment of Women.

The most of our race must expect to remain in the ordinary avocations of life, and it would be very much better were the majority of our people content with their pursuits.

Although it will hardly comport with the idea of propriety common even among the wives and daughters of Western New York farmers and Grangers, yet I will venture to call your attention to certain branches of industry in connection with agriculture, horticulture and kindred vocations which are now followed with pleasure and profit by some ladies in different sections of our great country.

I have lately read of a widow in Colorado who, about seven years ago, had only a tent to live in, with a young daughter. Her sole earthly possessions consisted of a very little furniture, together with two cows and two calves. As is usual in that region, the cost of keeping her stock was almost nothing. She sold milk at the town close by, and whenever she could spare a few dollars she would buy an extra calf or yearling. By patient continuance in this manner she has prospered, and now owns cattle by the hundreds, rides in her carriage, has educated her daughter and is worth many thousands of dollars, all the product of her own exertions.

Many others in various sections have started with two or three swarms of bees, and by patient study, inquiry and observation, coupled with industry, they are now among the most successful producers of honey the country affords. Could the two kinds of work just mentioned be combined together with the same good fortune, a land flowing with milk and honey might yet be found in the Western Hemisphere.

The raising of poultry and eggs for market purposes, if properly conducted, is often very profitable. Now, why is this not also a branch of business peculiarily adapted to women? Of course, like everything else, it requires knowledge, tact and time. Yet it has been well conducted by many and can be done again by others, though the teachings of the old story are still true that it is not safe to count chickens before they are hatched.

Then there are the small fruits. Surely if a woman wishes an avocation that will bring her health and wealth, both of these desirable objects are often found in this employment. The same may be said of gardening and various other kinds of work connected with the cultivation of the soil.

And one of the best features of all these industries is that when she wishes to dispose of her products nobody pays her less for them because she is a woman. The proceeds of her labor amount to precisely the same sum that would be obtained by the lords of creation. In other words, here, and almost nowhere else, she recives equal compensation with man for doing the same work.

Notes for Horsemen.

WHALE OIL FOR BOTS.

The Popular Science Monthly says whale oil was poured on a piece of a horse's stomach that was covered with botworms, and it made them let go their hold and die immediately.

POLL EVIL.

As soon as the sore is opened wash with castile soap, clean; then take lunar caustic, and be sure to get it into the bottom of the sore; leave it in six hours. Then make a wash of white vitriol and rain-water, not very strong, stirring it thoroughly with the castile soap, and wash the sore with it every morning. This has cured many valuable horses for me.

STAGGERS.

In this disease much depends on the treatment and on the management of the animal after an attack. In the first place, bleed freely from the neck—from six to ten quarts. Give immediately an active purge, throw up injections, and keep the animal's head wet with ice-water. In most new cases this treatment will effect a cure. Be careful to keep the bowels relaxed by giving two or three bran mashes weekly.

LAMPASS, OR THE GROOM'S FANCY.

When an animal does not take his accustomed amount of feed, whether it be a colt just getting his molar teeth, or a very old horse whose molars have become defective, the cruel operation is too often performed of burning the enlarged palate with a red-hot iron. If a colt is off his feed, treat him as a baby; he is then getting new teeth, and should have a soft diet—mashes, etc.—but do not allow the blacksmith to perform the unnecessary, injurious, and cruel operation of burning the lampass.

BREEDING FANCY POULTRY.—A great many beginners in poultry breeding fail from confining their fowls too closely, keeping one cock in a small pen with one or two hens. This is the natural result of trying to breed purely. Beginners usually have two or three choice fowls, and turning these out with a flock of dunghills destroys all chances of purity. One cock may be kept with 15 or 20 hens, and, by having only this number, the eggs from the pure breed fowls will be full blood, while the others will be half breeds, and all will be more sure of hatching than if fewer hens were kept with the cock.

MILK SOUP.—With cinnamon boil one quart of milk, two bay leaves, and moist sugar; put some sippets in a dish, pour the milk over them, and set the whole over a charcoal fire to simmer till the bread is soft; take the yolks of two eggs, beat them up, and mix them with a little of the milk, and throw it in; mix it altogether, and serve it up.

FROZEN potatoes can be cured by soaking them in water three days before cooking.

Modern Dancing.

How the dancing of the present day can afford any pleasure I cannot understand; and indeed it is a fact, as young ladies know to their cost, that very many young men are only with great difficulty induced to take part in this amusement. But why is dancing treated so lightly? Why is all attempt at grace given up? There is an old proverb which says, "Was nicht sauert susst auch nicht" ("What gives no trouble gives no pleasure either.") Men are too apt to treat with contempt whatever comes easily to them. But the skillful and graceful execution of any art always give pleasure both to the performers and to the lookers on. There was a time, for instance, when a well danced minuet afforded immense delight, and when even kings did not think it beneath their dignity to go through the dance with care and attention. By degrees, however, it became the fashion, first among the great people, and afterward among little people, who, at any rate, like to imagine that they are great, to act as if they were only pretending to dance. As all capacity for sound, healthy merriment and employment seems to be dying out, especially among men, so it is to be feared that dancing will in time quite cease in the higher strata of society. Even in the middle classes it is becoming less and less popular, and for very obvious reasons. The frantic jumping and chasing which nowadays constitutes dancing, necessitates frequent pauses in order to take breath, lackadaisical lounging and sauntering on the other hand, as if it were undignified to move quickly, is not by any means enjoyable; and the consequence is that young men at dances stand like mutes against the wall, and bore themselves and the ladies in the most gentleman-like and well-bred manner. For what can be more gentleman-like and well-bred than to display a black dress coat, a white cravat, white kid gloves, and an elegant hat? And what more can the heart desire than to see rows of gloomy figures, all dressed in precisely the same uniform; for one then feels convinced that one is in the best society. It was very different formerly, when mourning assemblies were unknown, and a ball was a gay, animated, and a happy scene. It was not only different, it was also better.—The Self-Made Man, Autobiography of Karl Frederick Von Kolden.

A ROMANTIC STORY.—In the middle of the Winter of 1838, a fire broke out in the female seminary at Limoges, France, and spread with such rapidity that it was feared all the inmates would perish. Suddenly there was a cry that one little girl had been left in her room. As the excited spectators were beginning to pray for the unfortunate, a tall girl, with dishevelled blond hair and flowing night-dress, ran through the crowd, and with a shriek of "I'll save her!" that arose above the crackling timbers and fallen masonry, dashed into the doorway. A loud hurrah that was prolonged to the echo, only to be repeated again, attracted the attention of the devotees, and the pale faced girl was seen hurrying through the flames with the terrified child. A few days thereafter King Louis Phillippe sent the heroine girl a gold medal for her bravery, and a captain of the French army, who had witnessed the girl's pluck, begged an introduction. The captain is now President of France, and the brave girl Madam MacMahon.

HOW TO BREAK OFF BAD HABITS.—Understand the reason, and all the reasons, why the habit is injurious. Study the subject until there is no lingering doubt in your mind. Avoid the places, the persons, and the thoughts that lead to the temptation. Frequent the places, associate with the persons, indulge in the thoughts that lead away from temptation. Keep busy; idleness is the strength of bad habits. Do not give up the struggle when you have broken your resolution once, twice—a thousand times. That only shows how much need there is for you to strive. When you have broken your resolutions just think the matter over and endeavor to understand why it is you failed, so that you may be on your guard against a recurrence of the same circumstances. Do not think it is an easy thing that you have undertaken. It is folly to expect to break off a bad habit in a day which may have been gathering long years.

SAVING LABOR.—Housekeepers would save both time and labor if they would try to keep clean rather than make clean. If you are careful not to drop crumbs of bread or cake on the carpet, you will escape an untidy room, and save the trouble of cleaning it. In working, if you make a practice of putting all the ends of your thread into a division of the work-box, kept for the purpose, and never let one fall on the floor, the room will look very differently at the end of the morning from what it does when this is not attended to. A house is kept far cleaner when all the members of the family are taught to wipe their feet thoroughly, on coming in from out of doors, than it can be done where it is neglected. There are a thousand ways of keeping clean and saving labor and time, which are well worth while to learn and practice, and though they may seem to entail trouble, it is not so with any one of refined feelings, who regards all labor to secure cleanliness a labor of duty and love.

MRS. HOUGH, a lady who died a few days ago in Alexandria, Pa., at the age of ninety-seven years, was one of the few women of the country who have cast a vote for a President. She grew up to womanhood in the State of New Jersey, where she was born, and when of age she cast a vote for Thomas Jefferson for President, as a property qualification in that State then entitled a woman to vote.
